GUNS ON THE MAUMEE

SURVEYORS RENDEZVOUS 2021

Hilton Garden Inn, Perrysburg, Ohio
September 22-25, 2021

The Ohio Country in the years following the Revolutionary War was a tough place to be a surveyor. The Indians recognized that settlers would soon follow the surveyors, and in the Northwestern Ohio Indian Wars, they fought fiercely to stop “these dogsquirts of men” from marking the territory and claiming the land for their own.

The 1794 Battle of Fallen Timbers, on the banks of the Maumee River, was a major victory for the United States. In the Treaty of Greenville that followed, the tribes ceded their claims to all lands south and east of the Greenville Treaty Line and to sixteen military reserves within Indian territory north of the line, including the Twelve Mile-Square Reserve.

With the Indian threat all but extinguished, settlers poured into the Ohio Country and by 1803, Ohio was a state. The west boundary would be a line due north from the mouth of the Great Miami River, which became the 1st Principal Meridian. The north line was a source of controversy that resulted in the Ohio/Michigan Boundary “War” in which eight surveyors were arrested, a county sheriff was stabbed in the leg by Two Stickney (not to be confused with his brother One) and one pig was killed.

Surveys in the disputed area are tied to the Michigan Meridian, which runs due north from the flagpole at Fort Defiance at the confluence of the Maumee and the Auglaize Rivers.

According to C.E. Sherman, who literally wrote the book on original Ohio land survey subdivisions, “Northwestern Ohio presents more regularity in its original surveys than any other similarly large area within Ohio's borders.” But that doesn't mean it's boring.

The War of 1812

Ohio played a critical role in the War of 1812. After the surrender of the garrison at Detroit, the Northwest was vulnerable to attack by the British and the Indians. In 1813, General William Harrison ordered the construction of Fort Meigs on a bluff overlooking the Maumee River rapids, across the river from Fort Miamis and within the 12 Mile-Square Reserve. The fort withstood two sieges in that same year. Our Friday activities will take place at reconstructed Fort Meigs.

To the east, Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry defeated and captured six ships of the British Royal Navy in the Battle of Lake Erie.

Visit Perry's Victory Monument on our optional Saturday trip to Put-in-Bay on South Bass Island.

"We have met the enemy and he is ours; two ships, two brigs, one schooner and one sloop."

Perry to General William Henry Harrison

Edward Tiffin, Ohio's first governor, was also the first superintendent of the General Land Office. He is credited with saving GLO land records when the British burned Washington, D.C. during the war. While serving as Surveyor General of the Northwest Territory, he issued his 1815 Instructions to Deputy Surveyors. In all, seven Ohio governors were surveyors at some point in their careers.

Rendezvous 2021 also has a connection to the Korean War. Can you figure out what it is?
